The a little while now, the pursuit of knowledge under the difficulties of hot weather and its attendant ills will be over, and the days of vacation will dawn upon the delighted vision of students and rollege faculties everywhere.

This is emphatically the season of sweet girl graduates, the reign of diaphanous white draperles, the time for stacks of flowers to be sent to a young man's beloved; the time for friends to find seats in commencement halls and wear out brand new white kid gloves in leading the frantic applause which is the rightful offering of a girl when she graduates.

The programme is an annual one. It tomes around every May and June, and yet it never loses its interest for those who participate in it and those who withess it. After the applause has been bestowed, the flowers accepted and the graduation ceremonial has been entirely wrought out, there still remains the interest of framing and hanging the diploma, and of encasing the graduating essay, tied with white ribbons and clussed among possessions to be cherished for aye.

The commencements that count for most in Richmond's social life are the 'finals,' as they have come to be called, of the Virginia Military Institute, and those of the University of Virginia and Washington and Lee University.

An invitation for a girl to attend the remans, which are the strong features of these 'finals,' sets the stamp of approval on her and establishes her reputation for popularity in a way that nothing else an quite do. As inevitable a part of her full measure of success as the diploma and the essay is the artermath of bellehood at the Virginia Universities and Institute.

bellehood at the Virginia Universities and Institute.

Many of the pretty girls make their initial debut at the finals and come out at home the next winter. There is always a number of dainty buds with their crisp white gowns all in order from the graduation platform, waiting to be transferred to the ball-room, where gowns and bright eyes work great have in the hearts of cadets and college men.

The Richmond quota of graduates will figure as handsomely at the "finals" this year as ever. They will, as those who have gone before them, drain the graduation cup of joy to the last drop without finding a single dreg to spoil its flavor.

NORFOLK, VA., May 23.—This week and all the weeks of this month have been dull in society. It has not been a marriage month, because, perhaps, the brides prefer the leafy month of June. They can't prefer June because of the leaves, because all of the foliage, as well as all of the flowers, of June are out now. The soason in other things has been very early, but the marriages have been derred, and the social events of greaty importance have been few. The number of negro marriages has been three times the number of white marriages, although the negro population is not two-fifths that of the white population here. It is probable, too, that the approach of the hot weather, when many of the citizens are arranging to spend at least a part of the summer at the beaches, has something to do with the duliness of the social season. Then there are a great many small parties for excursions, dancing parties at the resorts, and out-of-door amusements, which distract the attention of the members of the social set from the larger gratherings of the winter to the haty and for the summer.

MATHEWS, VA., May 28.—The funeral of Professor T. Algernon Rose, whose romentic marriage and sudden death were reported in The Times-Dispatch of Wednesday, the 20th instant, was held here on yesterday at St. Jonn's Episcopal Church, and the remains were interred at the burial ground at Christ Church, Kingston Parish. An immense concourse of friends attended the funeral and attested the wonderful popularity of Professor Rose. The pupils of Professor Rose and the Improved Order of Red Men, of which he was a member, attended the ceremonies in a body.

Professor Rose, who three years ago, came to Mathews a comparative stranger, had, by his manly and courtoous bearing and his winning personality, drawn to himself a host of friends, who feel a deep sense of personal loss in his untimely end.

Professor Rose had brought the Mathews High School up to a standard never before attained by it, and its future was an assured and continued success; but with the wife of his choice and bride of six hours at his side, when the fever had left the weakened body and health cial to The Times-Dispatch.
